6 February 2018

Excellency,

We have the honour to address you in our capacities as Working Group on the issue of human rights and transnational corporations and other business enterprises; Special Rapporteur on the issue of human rights obligations relating to the enjoyment of a safe, clean, healthy and sustainable environment; Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions; Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression; Special Rapporteur on the implications for human rights of the environmentally sound management and disposal of hazardous substances and wastes; and Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights defenders, pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 35/7, 28/11, 35/15, 34/18, 36/15 and 34/5.

In this connection, we would like to bring to the attention of your Excellency's Government information we have received concerning the situation of human rights defenders Mr. Elias de Souza, Ms. Vanessa Rosa dos Santos, Mr. Reginaldo Rosa dos Santos, Mr. Lúcio Guerra Júnio, Ms. Partícia Generoso, and Mr. Lúcio da Silva Pimenta, as well as their families, some of whom have been subjected to acts of intimidation and death threats, allegedly for having brought legal proceedings to question the legality of a public hearing for the expansion of the mining project Minas-Rio, and ultimately suspending the hearing. We also wish to refer to information received concerning the alleged interference of a British company Anglo American and its subsidiary operating in Brazil, Anglo American Minerio de Ferro Brasil, with a judicial process involving the company, as well as to information received regarding the underlying environmental and social impact of the Minas Rio Project in the state of Minas Gerais in Brazil.

Please note that similar letters on this matter were also addressed to the Government of Brazil and the British company Anglo American.

According to the information received:

a) Context

The Minas Rio Project is a large-scale iron ore mine located in the states of Minas Gerais and Rio de Janeiro, currently operated by Anglo American Minério de Ferro Brasil S.A. (Anglo American), a subsidiary of Anglo American Investimentos - Minério de Ferro Ltda, which in turn is a subsidiary of the British mining transnational Anglo American plc. The project, which began operations in 2014 and is at the moment undergoing its third phase of development, includes a mine, a beneficiation plant, a 525 kilometers pipeline and dedicated export facilities at the port of Açú. The third phase of development seeks to achieve an extraction rate of 56 million tons of iron ore a year, which allegedly poses a number of environmental and social concerns.

On 11 April 2017, a judge granted an injunction suspending a public hearing on the issue of the development of the third phase of the mine, on the basis that the convening of the hearing had been done with too short notice, insufficient outreach to the media, and without the necessary environmental assessments. On the same day, the company published a note on its website indicating that the suspension was harming the licensing process and putting at risk the continuity of the operations of the Minas-Rio Project.

Information started circulating thereafter on social media disclosing the names of the applicants in the case, and accusing them of harming the development of the project. From that moment onwards, the concerned human rights defenders – Mr. Elias de Souza, Ms. Vanessa Rosa dos Santos, Mr. Reginaldo Rosa dos Santos, Mr. Lúcio Guerra Júnior, Ms. Patrícia Generoso, and Mr. Lúcio da Silva Pimenta –, as well as their families, began to face different acts of intimidation and threats addressed to their communities, which continue to date, despite the fact that the hearing finally took place on 20 July 2017.

Mr. de Souza, Ms. Rosa dos Santos, Mr. Rosa dos Santos, Mr. Guerra, Ms. Generoso and Mr. da Silva Pimenta have denounced these acts before the state police and have sought protective measures by the Protection Program for Human Rights Defenders of the state of Minas Gerais (PPDDH). However, as will be explained below, a number of shortcomings allegedly hinder the effectiveness of the measures granted.

b) Acts of intimidation, threats and specific protection measures granted

Mr. Elias de Souza and his family

Mr. de Souza, who is recognized as a leader and representative of the rural communities of Conceição do Mato Dentro in the state of Minas Gerais, was subjected to several threats and a defamation campaign after the suspension of the hearing regarding the expansion of the Minas Rio Project on 11 April 2017.

On 12 April 2017, Mr. de Souza was attacked and received a death threat from a resident of São Sebastião do Bom Sucesso district, possibly as a result of the tension within the community among those in favour of the mining project, and those who opposed it. Mr. de Souza submitted a complaint on that same day to the Civil Police, which led to investigations and interrogations of witnesses in the following months. These proceedings are still pending.

Other threats received by Mr. de Souza following the suspension of the hearing concerning the circulation of anonymous pamphlets entitled “Leader or Criminal” (Líder ou Bandido), which accused him of attempting to impede the economic development of the communities involved in the project. Similarly, vehicles he identified as possibly belonging to the company started circling and doing bootleg turns in front of his house late at night on a regular basis, making a lot of noise and raising dust aimed at further intimidating him.

In addition, his house, already damaged by the vibrations caused by explosions taking place at the mine, was stoned by unidentified persons one night. It is claimed that on several occasions unidentified persons have taken photographs of those entering Mr. de Souza’s house.

On 16 May 2017, the PPDDH granted protection measures in light of the above-mentioned threats to Mr. de Souza and his family. These measures consisted of the installation of surveillance cameras in his house and the award of financial aid amounting to $540 reais per month [approximately 167 USD] during five months.

On 1 August 2017, after confirming that the threats had continued and were in fact worsened, PPDDH decided to transfer Mr. de Souza and his family to an undisclosed location to ensure their safety.

Ms. Vanessa Rosa dos Santos and Mr. Reginaldo Rosa dos Santos

Ms. Rosa dos Santos and Mr. Rosa dos Santos, who have been active in the protection of environmental human rights for many years, owned a farm located on grounds in which the slurry pipeline of the Minas Rio Project passed through. As a result of the noise, dust and lack of water caused by the pipeline project, they decided to resettle. However, they engaged in the struggle against the development of mining in their community, and started to receive threats. Among other acts of intimidation, Ms. Rosa dos Santos has received threats through text messages, and was once asked by a stranger whether she had a life insurance, adding: “do it fast, you will really need it”. They also found on a different day a note in their house, which said “We know it was you! For Anglo, always yes to step 3. Next.”

On 28 April 2017, Ms. Rosa dos Santos and Mr. Rosa dos Santos were harassed by a group of people while shopping. The group made reference to the suspension of the public hearing and the human rights activities of the five applicants of the judicial request. Allegedly, similar situations have happened on a number of occasions.

On 16 May 2017, the PPDDH granted protection measures to Ms. Rosa dos Santos and Mr. Rosa dos Santos consisting of the installation of surveillance cameras in their house and the allocation of financial aid of $937 reais per month [approximately 290 USD]. In its decision, the PPDDH acknowledged that “the level of vulnerability of the couple is immense”.

Mr. Lucio Guerra Júnior and Ms. Patrícia Generoso

Mr. Guerra Júnior is the founder of the movement REAJA (Network of Articulation and Environmental Justice for the People Affected by the Rio-Minas Project) and as such has been active in defending environmental rights in the context of the Minas Rio Project since it began explorations in 2008.

On 11 April 2017, the day the public hearing was suspended, he was added to five different groups on social media, where he immediately started to receive threats. In one of these groups, a message referred to another human rights defender who was threatened for opposing a mining company, saying “look what happens when someone speaks against the mine”.

On 17 and 24 April 2017, Mr. Guerra Júnior received several random phone calls offering him funeral services.

On 20 July 2017, the day the public hearing concerning Minas Rio finally took place, an agent from the military police was seen observing his house for the whole day.

On 26 July 2017, Mr. Guerra Júnior again received an isolated phone call offering funeral services.

On 29 August 2017, the day of the most recent public hearing related to the licensing process of the mining project, Ms. Generoso received several threatening phone calls.

On 6 September 2017, after a colleague came to her house to discuss questions related to the mining project, Ms. Generoso received phone calls every 20 to 30 minutes, which suggests that her house was being monitored.

On the week of the 11 to the 15 September 2017, before Ms. Generoso travelled to Geneva to take part in a side event during the 36th session of the Human Rights Council, she received an increasing number of automated phone calls offering funeral services or just silent calls.

Since Ms. Generoso’s trip to Geneva, the couple has continued to receive similar phone calls, not only on their mobile phones, but also on their landline at their other residence in the city of Belo Horizonte.

Mr. Guerra Júnior and Ms. Generoso filed a first complaint before the Public Ministry concerning these threats on 20 April 2017, and have on a number of occasions updated the authorities on the different ongoing threats they have received. To date, the case is still under investigation by the Public Ministry.

Mr. Guerra Júnior and Ms. Generoso did not receive protection measures by the PPDDH.

Mr. Lucio da Silva Pimenta

Mr. da Silva Pimenta was evicted from his home as a result of a judicial decision related to the development of the Minas Rio Project and now lives in a shed without running water or electricity. He has never received any compensation from the mining company. Mr. da Silva Pimenta was part of the group requesting the suspension of the public hearing. He has to date not received any threats.

c) Concerns regarding the limited capacity and lack of independence of the State authorities to effectively protect human rights defenders

According to the information received, several links exist between the Minas Gerais state Police and Anglo American, which may compromise its independence with regard to the protection of human rights defenders involved in activism against the mining activities of the company.

In this respect, it is alleged that Anglo American provided new trucks and refurbished the headquarters of the Military Police, the Military Police for Transportation and the Military Police for the Environment, the costs of which were around 2,5 million reais [approximately 775.294 USD]. It is similarly claimed that the company will refurbish the headquarters of the Civil Police, that it is building a new jail in Conceição do Mato Dentro, and that it funded the construction of sixteen houses for agents of the Military and Civil Police.

Another source of possible bias allegedly stems from the fact that a well-known former high-ranking official of the Military Police is currently employed by the company to coordinate its security activities. The retired policeman is said to spend significant amounts of time at the premises of the Military Police with his former colleagues, which puts him in a privileged position to access the files and often listen to persons presenting complaints, such that confidentiality is not guaranteed. Furthermore, it is feared that this particular ex-officer still exercises leverage over his former subordinates and thus is in a privileged position to secure the interests of the company. In addition, two other former policemen are said to work now for the company, further raising concerns about the independence of the State police.

Given the fact that key institutions for the investigation of crimes and the implementation of protection measures, such as the Public Ministry and the PPDDH, depend on the action of Military and Civil Police, the lack of independence of these corporations is said to severely hinder the efficiency of their work. As a consequence, such an environment discourages human rights defenders from contacting and trusting the State authorities. This severely jeopardized their work.

d) Public hearings organized by the Human Rights Commission of the Legislative Assembly of the state of Minas Gerais

On 24 May and 29 August 2017, public hearings were organized by the Human Rights Commission of the Legislative Assembly of the state of Minas Gerais to discuss the threats received by human rights defenders in the context of the Minas Rio Project. Following these hearings, the Public Ministry of Minas Gerais and the Federal Public Ministry issued recommendations urging the state of Minas Gerais to oblige Anglo American to guarantee appropriate compensation for the persons relocated; to ensure the right of the affected people to participate in the surveys of land, social and property registries; and to safeguard the right of those affected to enjoy independent and freely chosen technical advice of a multidisciplinary character. The State and Federal Public Ministries similarly recommended Anglo American to anticipate and recognize the rights to compensation and participation, ensuring at least the parameters already established by the State environmental agency in the previous phases of the project.

On 9 October 2017, the government of the state of Minas Gerais replied to these recommendations arguing that the communities concerned are not facing immitigable environmental damage, and thus that there is no obligation under Brazilian law to resettle them.

e) Environmental concerns

Water use and contamination

One of the critical environmental impacts of the project concerns the use of a water slurry pipeline to transport the processed powdered iron ore to an export port at in Açú, on the coast of the state of Rio de Janeiro. This pipeline is 525 kilometers long and passes through 32 municipalities (25 in the state of Minas Gerais and 7 in the state of Rio de Janeiro). Its construction was done in land that had to be expropriated, causing grave damage to agricultural livelihoods and to local ecosystems. Pastures were divided in two by a deep fissure where the pipeline passes. Erosion has reportedly increased. The construction of the port also counted on the expropriation of land, and has caused beach erosion, flooding, and pollution of local farmland by seawater.

It is alleged that the slurry pipeline uses 5,023 cubic meters of water per hour, and thus has significantly reduced the availability of fresh water for other uses, particularly agriculture, in the communities of Agua Quente, Passa Sete, Faustinos, Cabeceira do Turco, Tudo, Sapó, Gondo and Arrudas. Moreover, ammonia is added to the water in the pipeline to ensure that the powdered ore remains in suspension in the water and does not clog the pipe. Therefore, it is claimed that when there are leaks from the pipeline, this ammonia sums up to the pollutants that end up in local watercourses.

Waste disposal and the fear of tailings dam failure

The primary tailings dam of the Minas-Rio Project currently has a capacity of 370 million cubic meters of waste, which makes it one of the biggest in Brazil, and allegedly poses a risk to three communities located in areas where there would not be enough time for the authorities to intervene in case of an accident. The third step of the mining expansion plan envisages further heightening the dam. The communities concerned fear the consequences of possible dam failure, as has happened with other dams in the past. However, it is claimed that neither the state government nor the company consider the communities to be living on land directly affected by the mine. Therefore, these communities are not currently eligible for compensation or relocation.

Grave concern is expressed at the alleged acts of intimidation and death threats against Mr. Elias de Souza, Ms. Vanessa Rosa dos Santos, Mr. Reginaldo Rosa dos Santos, Mr. Lúcio Guerra Júnior, Ms. Partícia Generoso, and Mr. Lúcio da Silva Pimenta, as well as their families, in relation to having brought legal proceedings to question the legality of a public hearing for the expansion of the mining project Minas-Rio. Finally, we express our concern at the underlying environmental and social impacts of the Minas Rio Project in Minas Gerais.

While we do not wish to prejudge the accuracy of these allegations, we would like to draw the attention of your Excellency's Government to the relevant international norms and standards that are applicable to the issues brought forth by the situation described above, as detailed in the Annex on Reference to international human rights law attached to this letter.

As it is our responsibility, under the mandates provided to us by the Human Rights Council, to seek to clarify all cases brought to our attention, we would therefore be grateful for your observations on the following matters:

1. Please provide any additional information and/or comment(s) you may have on the above-mentioned allegations.
2. Please provide information on the measures taken by your Excellency's Government to ensure that Anglo American implements its responsibilities under international human rights law and standards, including the U.N. Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, in its overseas operations.

3. Please indicate what measures or policies have been adopted by your Excellency's Government to address allegations of this kind related to corporate human rights abuse against business enterprises domiciled in your territory and/or jurisdiction throughout their overseas operations.

We would appreciate receiving a response within 60 days. Your Excellency's Government's response will be made available in a report to be presented to the Human Rights Council for its consideration.

While awaiting a reply, we urge that all necessary interim measures be taken to halt the alleged violations and prevent their re-occurrence and in the event that the investigations support or suggest the allegations to be correct, to ensure the accountability of any person(s) responsible for the alleged violations.

We intend to publicly express our concerns in the near future as, in our view, the information upon which the press release will be based is sufficiently reliable to indicate a matter warranting immediate attention. We also believe that the wider public should be alerted to the potential implications of the above-mentioned allegations. The press release will indicate that we have been in contact with your Excellency's Government's to clarify the issue/s in question.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of our highest consideration.

Annex

Reference to international human rights law

In connection with above alleged facts and concerns, we would like to draw the attention of your Excellency's Government to the relevant international norms and standards that are applicable to the issues brought forth by the situation described above.

In particular, we would like to refer you to articles 3 and 19 of the Universal Declaration on Human Rights (UDHR), and articles 2, 6 and 19 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), ratified by the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland on 20 May 1976, which guarantee the right to an effective remedy, to life, liberty and security of person, and to freedom of opinion and expression.

We would also like to draw attention to the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (A/HRC/17/31), which clarify that under international human rights obligations "States must protect against human rights violations committed in their territory and/or their jurisdiction by third parties, including companies" (principle 1). This requires States to "state clearly that all companies domiciled within their territory and/or jurisdiction are expected to respect human rights in all their activities" (Principle 2).

General Comment No. 24 on State Obligations under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in the Context of Business Activities sets out that "the extraterritorial obligation to protect requires States Parties to take steps to prevent and redress infringements of Covenant rights that occur outside their territories due to the activities of business entities over which they can exercise control, especially in cases where the remedies available to victims before the domestic courts of the State where the harm occurs are unavailable or ineffective. In discharging their duty to protect, States Parties should also require corporations to deploy their best efforts to ensure that entities whose conduct these corporations may influence, such as subsidiaries (including all business entities in which they have invested, whether registered under the State party's laws or under the laws of another State) or business partners (including suppliers, franchisees or sub-contractors) respect Covenant rights. Corporations domiciled in the territory and/or jurisdiction of States Parties should be required to act with due diligence to identify, prevent and address abuses to Covenant rights by such subsidiaries and business partners, wherever they may be located."

With respect to the right to freedom of opinion and expression, we would wish to reiterate the principle enunciated in Human Rights Council Resolution 12/16, which calls on States to recognize its exercise as one of the essential foundations of a democratic society. Similarly, we would like to recall General Comment No. 31 of the Human Rights Committee, which observed that there is a positive obligation on States to ensure protection of individuals exercising Covenant rights, including the right to recourse to legal remedies and to freedom of expression, against violations by its agents and by private persons or entities, which includes the duty to exercise due diligence to prevent, punish, investigate and bring perpetrators to justice and to redress the harm caused by non-state actors. A failure to investigate and bring perpetrators of such violations to justice could, in and of itself, give rise to a separate breach of the ICCPR (CCPR/C/21/Rev.1/Add.13, paras. 8 and 18). Moreover, the Principles on Effective Prevention and Investigation of Extra-legal, Arbitrary and Summary Executions, in particular principle 4, stress the obligation to protect through judicial or other means all individuals and groups who are in danger of extra-legal, arbitrary or summary executions, including those who receive death threats.

Reference should also be made to the fundamental principles set forth in the Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, also known as the UN Declaration on Human Rights Defenders. Of particular relevance are articles 1 and 2 of the Declaration which state that everyone has the right to promote and to strive for the protection and realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms at the national and international levels, and that each State has a prime responsibility and duty to protect, promote and implement all human rights and fundamental freedoms. Article 5 (a) establishes that for the purpose of promoting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms, everyone has the right, individually and in association with others, at the national and international levels: to meet or assemble peacefully; article 6 (b) and (c) provides that everyone has the right to freely publish, impart or disseminate to others views, information and knowledge on all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and to study, discuss, form and hold opinions on the observance of these rights. article 12 (1) and (3), provides for the right to participate in peaceful activities against violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms, as well as for the right to be protected effectively under national law in reacting against, or opposing, through peaceful means, activities and acts that result in violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

We recall Human Rights Council resolution 31/32, which in its paragraph 1 reaffirms the urgent need to respect, protect, promote and facilitate the work of those defending economic, social and cultural rights as a vital factor contributing towards the realization of those rights, including as they relate to environmental and land issues as well as development.

The United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (A/HRC/17/31) clearly outline that private actors and business enterprises have a responsibility to respect human rights, which requires them to avoid infringing on the human rights of others to address adverse human rights impacts with which they are involved. The responsibility to respect human rights is a global standard of expected conduct for all business enterprises wherever they operate. It exists independently of States' abilities and/or willingness to fulfil their own human rights obligations, and does not diminish those obligations. Furthermore, it exists over and above compliance with national laws and regulations protecting human rights. In particular, this includes companies undertaking a due diligence process in the field of human rights to identify, prevent, mitigate and respond to the negative human rights consequences in which they may be involved, either through their own activities or as a result of their commercial relations (Principles 17-21). This process of identifying and assessing actual or potential negative human rights consequences should include substantive consultations with potentially affected groups and other stakeholders (Principle 18).

With regards to the State responsibilities of states in relation to Business and Human Rights, the UN Guiding Principles also provide, in its articles 25 to 31, that as part of their duty to protect against business-related human rights abuse, States must take appropriate steps to ensure, through judicial, administrative, legislative or other appropriate means, that when such abuses occur within their territory and/or jurisdiction those affected have access to effective remedy.

Finally, the Guiding Principles recognize the important and valuable role played by independent civil society organizations and human rights defenders. In particular, Principle 18 underlines the essential role of civil society and human rights defenders in helping to identify potential adverse business-related human rights impacts. The Guiding Principles also emphasize that "States must ensure [...] that there is no obstacle to the legitimate and peaceful activities of human rights defenders" (comment on Principle 26).
