We are writing to express our concerns that the Regional Agreement on Access to Information, Participation and Justice in Environmental Matters in Latin America and the Caribbean (Escazú Agreement) has not entered into force because it has not acquired the minimum number of 11 ratifications. We reiterate our call urging your Excellency's Government to ratify the Escazú Agreement as a matter of priority.¹

The Escazú Agreement, negotiated under the auspices of the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), was adopted on 4 March 2018 in Costa Rica, and was opened for signature on 27 September 2018.

This landmark regional treaty not only guarantees good environmental governance and human rights including the rights to access information, to participate in decision-making processes as well as to seek remedies, and is also a catalyst for environmental protection and sustainable development. It places a strong emphasis on the fundamental objective of protecting the right to live in a healthy environment.

In keeping with international human rights obligations, the Escazú Agreement sets important standards that will be fundamental in addressing some of the world's most pressing challenges such as climate change, the decline of biological diversity, land degradation, pollution of air and water, natural disasters and the depletion and unsustainable use of natural resources. The Agreement aims to protect the cultural diversity of Latin America and the Caribbean and to recognize the rights of indigenous peoples, local communities, and vulnerable groups. The treaty also underscores States' obligations to foster inclusive participation, combat inequality and discrimination, and guarantee the equal rights of every person to a healthy environment and to sustainable development.

This is a time when environmental human rights defenders in the region are suffering unprecedented levels of violence, intimidation, and harassment, and women human rights defenders face unique challenges which are often driven by multiple and intersecting forms of discrimination against women. The Escazú Agreement is the first of its kind in the world to include specific, binding provisions for the protection and promotion of people, groups and organizations that promote and defend human rights in environmental matters.

By promptly ratifying this ground-breaking treaty, your country will reinforce its strong commitment to the protection and promotion of human rights and the environment.

To date, sixteen of the thirty-three countries of Latin America and the Caribbean region have signed the treaty and one, Guyana, has ratified it. We urge the Commonwealth of Dominica to ratify the Escazú Agreement as early as possible before 27 September 2019, which marks one year since the Agreement was opened for signature. This will enable the Agreement to come into force so that the vital process of implementation can commence.

With regard to the above, we hope to seek clarification on the process. We would be grateful for your observations on the following matters:
